

Creating in a World-Building Context

Every piece you make answers to one idea. The hero project, the brand, the statement, the site, the video, the printed work — all of it should read as a single creative experience.

SHOWCASE

September 19

WHERE IT STARTS

Your project should finish one of these sentences

Before you make anything, you need a position — a statement, a feeling, an experience, a world you want to explore. Everything downstream is in service of it.

1

I made this as a statement about...

2

This represents my feelings or experiences around...

3

I built this world, product, story, or brand to explore...

A collection of unrelated pieces is not a Capstone.

WHAT YOU PRESENT

Seven parts, one experience

01

Hero Project

The centerpiece

02

Brand Design

Name, logo, type, color

03

Artist Statement

The conceptual foundation

04

Project Website

Explore at your own pace

05

Process Video

The creative journey

06

Printed Elements

The physical presentation

07

Brand Campaign

Optional extension

SHOWCASE

September 19

Nothing here stands alone. The showcase reads all of it as one piece.

01

Hero Project

THE CENTERPIECE

The clearest, most complete expression of the world, story, idea, product, or experience you are making. It is built directly on the theme you set in your artist statement.

Present it physically, digitally, or both.

One rule

If someone sees only this piece, they should still understand what your project is about.

IT MAY TAKE THE FORM OF

- A short animation
- Several finished pages from a graphic novel — not the whole book
- A product design or product rendering
- An interactive experience
- A pitch or proof of concept for a larger future project
- An app or digital experience
- A personal or autobiographical project
- Another format approved by the instructor

Brand Design

One identity, pulled out of your own work, so the whole exhibit reads as a single experience.

MUST INCLUDE

- A project name
- A logo or wordmark
- A typography system
- A consistent color palette
- A recognizable visual style

APPLY IT ACROSS

- The website
- The video or slideshow
- Printed materials
- Signs and display elements
- The optional campaign

WHERE IT COMES FROM

The brand should not feel bolted on. It grows out of the project's own themes, imagery, characters, environments, products, and ideas.

Design it last, from what you already made.

Artist Statement

Several thoughtful paragraphs. This is the foundation everything else stands on — it tells the audience not what you made, but why.

01

The central idea or theme

02

Why you conceived and developed it

03

What it represents personally, socially, culturally, creatively

04

The world, story, brand, product, or experience you are building

05

The challenges you ran into 06

How you approached or solved them

07

What you want the audience to understand or feel

08

The ultimate goal of the project

09

How it could continue or expand

Project Website

Separate from your personal portfolio, fully branded around the project. The interactive version of your process video — visitors explore at their own pace.

MAY INCLUDE

- Project name, logo, and visual identity
- Your artist statement
- An introduction to the concept or world
- The finished hero project
- Research and visual inspiration
- Sketches, thumbnails, and blockouts
- Character, environment, prop, or product designs
- Storyboards and process documentation
- Animation, video, audio, interactive elements
- A gallery of final artwork
- Downloadable or printable materials
- Credits and contact information

A complete digital experience — not a folder of images put online.

Navigation, type, color, layout, imagery, and motion all carry the story.

PRINTABLES MIGHT BE

Posters · character sheets · activity sheets · storyboards · artwork · project summaries or excerpts

Process Video or Slideshow

Document how the project developed and present the creative journey.

MAY INCLUDE

- Research and inspiration
- Early ideas and rough sketches
- Thumbnails and blockouts
- Environment studies
- Character and prop designs
- Storyboards
- Design experiments
- Work-in-progress images
- Problems you hit, and how the project changed
- The finished hero project

NO

complex animation required.

A well-designed slideshow with music, narration, captions, or simple motion counts. Use your logo, type, colors, and visual style throughout.

Printed Elements

Physical pieces that help the audience read the project, its development, and the world around the hero piece.

A project poster

Your artist statement

Storyboards

Rough sketches and development sheets

Character, environment, or product designs

Promotional cards,
postcards, flyers

Graphic novel pages

Final artwork or product renderings

Branded signs and display labels

The same printables offered on the site

Print early. Nothing looks the way you expect it to on paper.

07

Brand Campaign

OPTIONAL EXTENSION

Promote, launch, or sell the hero project to a wider audience. How do people discover it, share it, or step into its world?

Social posts & reels

Teaser or trailer

Guerrilla marketing

Posters, flyers, stickers

QR codes to the site

Shirts, buttons, totes

Digital ads

Launch event or installation

ANSWER FOR YOURSELF

- Who is the audience?
- What should they think, feel, or do?
- Where will they run into it?
- How does it expand the world?
- How would you measure interest?

Finished examples, digital mockups, or prototypes are all fine — you do not have to manufacture everything.

How the pieces connect

CARRIED BY

THE POINT OF ALL OF IT

A finished Capstone says more than what you made. It says why you made it, how you developed it, who it is for, and what larger idea it belongs to.

Seen together, the hero project, brand, statement, website, process video, printed work, and campaign should feel like parts of one thing.

01

02

03

04

05

06

07

SHOWCASE

September 19